Newest Edition to the Community

Entering the 2024-2025 "back to school" season, the US&S family is proud to announce the unveiling of a new Little Free Library. Located right outside our corporate office, the Little Free Library is dedicated to giving out free books for students and nonstudents alike in the Greenville community.

As a company that values family and stewardship, it is with excitement that we introduce this service into the community to help raise the literacy rates of our future leaders.

In addition to multiple children's books and self-help books housed within, our very own team member and motor sports enthusiast, Jennifer Fuller, has dedicated her short-story to the new Little Free Library. In "Jenny Drives a Race Car", young children are given an introduction into the world of racing, and leave knowing any dream is possible.

Design Inspiration

- Multiple team members came together to build and paint the library, using the company's core value colors as the base.
- Tropical birds and koi fish are painted around all sides, symbolizing freedom and perseverance as one gains knowledge through reading.
